Oregon Wins Awards at the Big P. P. I. Exposition (Capital Journal Special Service.) Oregon Building, P. P. I. E., Nov. 20.—Oregon, which recently made such satisfactory winnings at the Stock Show has now repeated the offense by picking up about all the world-wide prizes at the Sheep and Goat Show. In fact, if it had not been for the Oregon animals there would not have been a show. In the Cotswolds, Oregon cleaned up everything on the map, and the result in the Lincoln competition was practically the same. In both of these breeds and in South-downs, Oxford and Dorset Horns, Oregon exhibitors had the champion ewes and rams and the reserves. That's going some. Besides these winnings, high awards in all the other classes were captured. In Shropshires, C. E. Cleveland, of Gresham, landed one first, several seconds, and was fortunate in having the reserve champion ewe under one year. In the Hampshire the Willamette Valley Stock and Lamb Company of Corvallis won several seconds and thirds. On Cotswold, Wm. Biddell and Sons, Monmouth had the champion ram two years old or over and P. A. Koser, of Bicknell, the champion ram one year or under, and the under one year, also second and third in each instance. And on through the list these two Willamette Valley exhibitors took first, second and third. In the Oxford, C. P. Kiser of Harrisburg got first and second in the dozen different classes, and also had the champion and reserve ram and ewe. In the Dorset, Cleveland of Gresham landed everything, first, second, third, in every class. In the Southdowns there was some especially stiff competition with exhibits from the University of California, but J. G. S. Hubbard of Moore won all the first and all of the seconds with one exception. Hawley & Son, our own Commissioner Hawley, proved to have the champion and reserve ram, and the champion ewe in the Lincolns, while Biddell & Sons of Monmouth showed the reserve champion ewe. These two also cleaned up the seconds and thirds with the Hawleys having a little the better of the number of prizes won. When it came to the Romney, Wm. Biddell, Jr., got everything in sight. O. A. C. made several entries in Shropshires and won first in pure bred wethers one year and under two, also winning second and third. The college had the championship pen of pure bred year-old wethers, and the wether lamb won second and third. Goat prizes landed in Oregon in about the same proportion. As a whole it was an Oregon show, with Oregon on the long end of the prizes and money.

STAYTON HIGH SCHOOL... Over four hundred residents of the school district and friends from the surrounding country were in attendance at the official opening and dedication of the new high school last Friday evening. The first part of the evening was spent in visiting and inspecting the new building. All expressed themselves as well satisfied with the construction, arrangement and equipment of the high school and with the manner in which the school work is being carried on.

At 8:30 all gathered in the spacious auditorium and listened to a well arranged program, consisting of an address of congratulation by Mayor Beauchamp, lectures by members of the Extension Staff of the Oregon Agricultural college, a brief talk by County Superintendent W. M. Smith and by Supervisor John W. L. Smith, of Salem, remarks by various citizens, and musical numbers by the Wanda Brown, the high school chorus and the high school orchestra, it being the initial public appearance of both of these last named organizations. "Stayton should be congratulated," said County Superintendent Smith in his talk, "upon this fine building. I consider it the best and most up-to-date high school building to be found in any town of this size in the state."

Washington Building and Loan Association Excluded From State... The Pacific Building and Loan association, a Washington corporation, will not be allowed to do business in this state, according to the announcement of Corporation Commissioner Schulderman this morning. During the 1913 session the Washington legislature passed a law prohibiting building and loan associations from outside of the state from doing business in Washington and this, of course, allows outside states to use their own judgment about prohibiting the Washington corporations from invading this territory. In reply to the Washington company's application for a certificate Mr. Schulderman says in part: "The Oregon laws provide 'when by the laws of any other state, territory, or nation, any taxes, fines, penalties, licenses, fees, deposits of money or securities, or other obligations or prohibitions are imposed on building and loan associations of this state, doing business in such other state, territory or nation, or upon other agents therein, so long as such laws continue in force, the same obligations and prohibitions of whatever kind may be imposed upon all building and loan associations of such state, territory or nation, doing business in this state, and upon their agents here.' This section, as the construction by the attorney general, vests the corporation commissioner with discretion to grant application of the Pacific Building and Loan association and thereby admit it to do business within the state of Oregon, or to refuse the same. I do not think this discretion should be abused or should be used indiscreetly as a weapon of retaliation, yet I am convinced that the people of this state caused this law to be placed upon our statute books to be used as a means of self-defense and protection. The welfare of the people of Oregon demands the same treatment of her citizens and corporations at the hands of a foreign state as this state affords and gives to the citizens and corporations of such other states. The laws of Washington expressly prohibit any Oregon building and loan association that was not engaged in the business of a building and loan association in the state of Washington before the passage and approval of the law of which said section 23 herein cited is a part, from entering the state of Washington for the purpose of doing a building and loan business. 'It occurs to me this is just one more instance where the people of Oregon are asked to pay toll to the state of Washington. So long as the state of Washington sees fit to enact laws that unjustly discriminate against the people of Oregon, there is no particular advantage or benefit to the people of Washington in granting to the people of Washington privileges that will not in turn be advantageous to our people, but on the contrary will take money out of the state, hence I have concluded to deny you permission to enter the state of Oregon as a building and loan association.'

Commissioner Booth Honored... In appreciation of the able and especially happy service rendered by R. A. Booth of Eugene, while resident commissioner of the Oregon building and loan association, the Oregon building and loan association presented with him in the work here presented with the finest universal book cover that money would buy in San Francisco, the name of the giver being inscribed thereon. The presentation was fraught with such good feeling and the expressions were such that Mr. Booth and several members of the Oregon family gathered about the great fireplace in the reception room were in tears. During his official ascendancy at the Oregon building, which is now the portion of Commissioner C. L. Hawley, the Eugene man met all of the complications and affairs in general with such evident desire to accomplish the most, and did it all with such tact that universal good will developed into increasing admiration and no little affection. Acting as spokesman for the "family" Mr. C. Sheldon voiced this sincere good feeling in such phrases that Mr. Booth, to whom the occasion was a complete surprise, was overcome with emotion. He finally protested against accepting all the credit given him and insisted that he had only tried to do his duty as well as the many others about the building had done theirs. If he had met with favor, he was happy, but he was most happy in the belief that all together had accomplished greatly for Oregon, the brightest gem in the diadem of states that crowns the Pacific. He regretted the severance of these strong, though hurried ties and urged that he would ever hold extremely happy recollections of his associations with the Oregon building people. Both Mr. and Mrs. Booth have been popular at the Oregon building, and were effective in extending the social relations in such way that Oregon will necessarily profit.

Mr. Workingman, How Does This Strike You? (From Remarks of Clyde H. Tavenner.) Thanks to an investigation of the Bethlehem Steel company's strike in 1910, information is available as to conditions of labor in the iron-making concern's plants. The inquiry was made by the United States Bureau of Labor in 1910, under the direction of Ethelbert Stewart, a special agent of the Labor Bureau at the time, who bore the reputation of being one of the most experienced economic investigators in the country. When this strike began there were no labor organizations in the plant; the company would not permit them. It was the higher grade workers who led off in the strike. A majority of the highest grade men are approximately 40 to 45 years of age. They were frequently being required to work overtime on week days and to do additional work on Sundays. Fearing that the encroachments of overtime and Sunday work were leading to a 12-hour day and 7-day schedule for the whole force, they therefore protested. Therefore the protesting committee was discharged; therefore the strike. The government investigation revealed this: Out of every 100 men—29 working 7 days every week; 43, including these 29, working some Sundays in the month; 51 working 12 hours a day; 25 working 12 hours a day, 7 days a week; 46 earning less than $2 a day. These are the grim figures which the United States Bureau of Labor gives us of the working shifts of the Bethlehem Steel company as drawn from the company's own time books. This is the manner in which the concerns that have drawn down $170,000,000 of the people's money were treating their employees in 1910. Since that time considerable 8-hour day legislation has been passed, and there is no record of the number of 12-hour shifts now in force. Workingmen of the nation, are you willing that your government shall continue to give contracts running into the millions annually to firms that have mistreated and underpaid their employees as have these great war-trickling concerns? If you are not willing, then protest against it. But let me assure you at the outset that one protest will be of no avail. The chances are you will have to speak loud and often before your voice will be heard in far-off Washington.

PRESIDENT WILSON'S WORK AS A TYPIST... Washington, Nov. 20.—When President Wilson writes a message to congress it looks something like this: In addition to which the machine's alphabet is badly checked as to legs and shoulders. The space bar suffers from intermittent paralysis. Some of the letters are virtually mute. Others have bold, black faces. The ribbon is about as fresh and whole as a battle flag in a museum. The mechanism generally is decrepit, and limps heavily through the affairs of state only under the severest presidential goading. Mr. Wilson admits it is far from faultless, but he likes it, and he is very proud of the fact that it has no hyphen. You couldn't get a typewritten line out of the president on any machine but this one—not even with a dark-lantern and a jimmy. White House humorists say he has had-raise the poor old thing so long he has developed a personal attachment for it. If so, that is only valuable attachment it has. For years and years the ancient machine has endured professional, authorial and presidential pecking. And pecking is right, for Mr. Wilson is a disciple of the hint system, or forefinger location. Wherefore it may be said that this is the only typewriter that ever had the distinction of having hesitated with a president. It might be added that this couple is getting ready to lead congress a merry dance this winter while the orchestra plays "You Preparedness."
